

Dr. Pradeep Jagtap

Director – Publications

Dr. Pradeep Jagtap is a senior media professional, editor, and social intellectual with wide-ranging experience across journalism, publications, academic coordination, and international institutional engagement. He has held leadership roles in print media, cultural organisations, and registered educational and social bodies, contributing to thought leadership, public communication, and institutional visibility.

He has served as Chief Editor and Editor of prominent publications and has led multiple registered organisations in capacities such as President, Trustee, Secretary, and Director. His work reflects long-standing involvement in literary, cultural, educational, and social initiatives, particularly those connected to public discourse, rights, and community development.

Dr. Pradeep Jagtap has also been actively associated with international academic and social organisations, serving in coordination and ambassadorial roles with universities and institutions in India, the USA, France, and the UK. His participation as a Chief Guest and academic representative at national and international conferences highlights his role in bridging academia, society, and public communication.

With strong expertise in editorial leadership, publication strategy, and media coordination, he brings credibility and visibility to institutional initiatives. His experience supports the dissemination of academic work, policy dialogue, and institutional narratives in a responsible and impactful manner.

As Director – Publications, Dr. Pradeep Jagtap oversees publication strategy, editorial standards, academic content dissemination, and media coordination, supporting AIPU's mission to amplify the voices, research, and initiatives of private universities across India and beyond.
